

Isle of Man
Government

Reiltys Ellan Vannin

COMPLAINTS POLICY & PROCEDURE

Department of Education Sport and Culture

Rheynn Ynsee Spoyrt as Cultoor

Complaints Policy & Procedure

The Department of Education Sport and Culture realises that however hard as an organisation it tries, there will be occasions where it will receive complaints about its services.

If you feel dissatisfied with the quality of service or a decision made by a member of staff, please talk to the person concerned as they may be able to resolve the matter immediately, the vast majority of complaints can be resolved informally at the first point of contact.

When complaints are received, we will ensure they are investigated openly and honestly.

Who should you complain to?

However if you are still not satisfied you should in the first instance address your concern with relevant the Head of Service :

- Headteacher – Primary & Secondary School complaints
- Head of Sport & Recreation – MSR & NSC complaints
- Director of Arts & Culture – Art & Culture Complaints
- Director of Safeguarding & Inclusion – Safeguarding, Youth & Educational Psychology Services complaints
- Director of Corporate Services – Corporate Services complaints

If the matter has still not been resolved to your satisfaction, you can then send a letter to the Complaints Officer, Hamilton House, Peel Road, Douglas IM1 5EZ, or by e mail to admin.dec@doe.gov.im

The Complaints Officer will need to – have:

- A clear description outlining your complaint and how you feel the matter can be satisfactorily resolved.

know:

- The member/s of staff who has been dealing with the complaint
- Your full postal address and telephone number.

What action will be taken?

We will treat all written complaints seriously and deal with them in a confidential manner.

You can expect to be treated with courtesy, respect and fairness at all times and we expect that you will also treat our staff dealing with your complaint with the same courtesy, respect and fairness.

We will acknowledge receipt of your complaint within 5 working days and a review/investigation into your complaint will be undertaken by a senior officer as quickly as possible. You can expect a full written answer within 20 working days. If we are not able to send a full reply within these timescales we will inform you of the reason why and will keep you up to date on the progress.

Anonymous Complaints

It is usually proper to disregard anonymous complaints, unless somebody is prepared to substantiate them.

Malicious Complaints

Where a complaint has been received and investigated by the Department and in the opinion of the Investigating Officer the complaint is malicious or vexatious, the Department will consider taking further action against the person who has submitted the complaint – See Appendix 1 Vexatious Complaints, Unreasonable and Abusive Behaviour Policy.

Remedies

When we get things wrong we will act to:

- Accept responsibility and apologise
- Explain what went wrong and why, and
- Make any changes required
- Learn lessons from mistakes and review any policies or practices where appropriate

The remedy applied needs to be proportionate and appropriate to the failure in service, and take into account what redress people seek when they complain

Appendix 1

Vexatious Complaints, Unreasonable and Abusive Behaviour Policy

Vexatious or repetitive Complaints

On occasions we receive complaints which can be deemed vexatious or repetitive. Some of these complaints can be costly to handle; or responding to them may be a disproportionate use of staff's time.

Deciding whether a complaint is vexatious requires us in each case to take into account the context and history of the complaint. We will consider whether the complaint is likely to cause unjustified distress, disruption or irritation. In particular we will consider the following issues:

- Could the complaint fairly be seen as obsessive?
- Is the complaint harassing or causing distress to staff?
- Does the complaint appear to be designed to cause disruption or annoyance?
- Does the complaint lack any serious or value?

We will take into consideration the following factors (which are not an exhaustive list) when determining whether a complaint is vexatious:

- Where the complaint requests information which has already been provided
- Where the nature and extent of the complainant's correspondence with us suggests an obsessive approach to disclosure.
- Where the tone adopted in correspondence by the complainant is confrontational and demonstrates that the purpose is to argue and not really obtain information
- Where the correspondence could reasonably be expected to have a negative effect on the health and wellbeing of our staff
- Where the complaint, viewed as a whole, appears to be intended simply to re-open issues which have been disputed several times before, and is, in effect, the pursuit of a complaint by alternative means.
- Where it is not a one off complaint, but a case of the same complaints having been made repeatedly, or where on repetition, the particulars of the complaints have been varied making it difficult to know exactly what the complainant is seeking and making it less likely that the request can be satisfied.

No single one of the above factors would lead to a finding, by itself, that a complaint was vexatious. However, based on the strength of the various factors, taken together with the history and context of a complaint, a complaint may be deemed vexatious by the Department.

Complaints can sometimes become a vehicle for individuals to try to reopen previous issues. Although we recognise that people are not always satisfied with the responses they receive, the raising of complaints is not a panacea for problems that have not been resolved through other channels. Continued complaints after the underlying complaint has been addressed, go beyond the reasonable pursuit of resolution.

Our staff have the right to undertake their work free from abuse, threats and harassment, or vexatious and repetitive complaints. We expect our staff to be treated with courtesy and respect. The Department has a duty to protect the welfare and safety of staff and considers threats or abuse toward staff is unacceptable. Staff are also expected to treat complaints with courtesy, respect and fairness.

We also consider that inflammatory statements and unsubstantiated allegations can amount to abusive behaviour.

Where complaints are deemed vexatious, the complainant will be notified in writing that no further correspondence will be entered into on the matter in question.

Where unreasonable or abusive behaviour is determined, the complainant will be notified in writing that no further contact will be undertaken, and this will apply to all Department contacts. A decision to restrict contact will be reconsidered if the complainant subsequently demonstrated more reasonable behaviour.

If appropriate incidents of harassment or aggression will be documented and if felt necessary will be reported to the Police.